Wonder if Major Olson ever heard the story of the dog that hit the hand that fed him?

The world series baseball games may be able to stop business on the stock exchange, but up to this time it has not abated any interest here in the coming November election.

Was it through accident or intention that Tuesday night's meeting was called on council meeting night? At a real citizen's meeting, presumptively the presence of seven or eight of the city's business men should be desired.

Let us forget. That is still in New Hampshire, Lind continues to rusticate in Mount Crater. The former awaits his trial, which now seems many moons away, and the latter some decisive action on the part of Wilson and Bryan, which seems many more than that.

We'll get cheaper goods all right enough under the new tariff, but the foreigner gets our money and it is money that never will be returned to its native shores. Then, too, if someone else makes our goods what effect is that going to have on our own skilled and unskilled labor? Possibly it can find employment where the goods are made. Ask the Price merchant and producer where he would get off should the Price consumer buy exclusively at a Chicago mail order house?

This impression contains the call for a primary by C. C. McWhinney, republican precinct chairman, for the nomination of a full set of municipal officers. With but few exceptions the republicans of the Price precinct have requested this call be made. Not only do they feel that they can name the winning ticket, but in any event they are ready to take their chances at the polls and go down the line for the O. O. P.—grasp victory if it comes that way or defeat if it comes the other.

For better or for worse, for the country's weal or the country's woe the new tariff is before the people. Everyone hopes that its operation will work for the country's betterment. With $70,000,000 worth of foreign goods in the bonded warehouses of New York alone and fleets of merchantmen hovering near the ports of the Atlantic seaboard all loaded in the goods with foreign-made freight, everyone does not feel like joining in the democratic chorus of rejoicing that Underwood and Bismarck have given the United States the lowest tariff bill since the notorious Walker measure.

If you should investigate Price with a fine tooth comb you would find but two somnolents in the voting precinct. At least, that is The Advocate's advice. The two are Messrs. Goodman and Karlari, according to the same source of information. Therefore, if this information is correct, an article appearing on the front page of this impression is incorrect that the socialists had anything whatsoever to do with the naming of Tuesday night's ticket. And further, the clerks of this precinct had little to do when they placed on record forty-nine socialist votes at the last general election. In this trying situation we have been reading the scriptures considerably of late and we are strongly impressed with a passage we ran across. It went something like this: "By their works ye shall know them."

CONSISTENCY, THOU ART A JEWEL.

(From the Ogden Examiner.)

I Am for Utah. I Believe in Utah-Made Goods. I Trade at Home. I Boost for Home Trade. I Am Opposed to Sending Money Out of the State for Things That Can Be Purchased at Home. I Am—but what's the use—everybody knows what I am and if they do not they can look at the billboards or write to Eastern concerns where I send my money. I Am the Billboard Builder. I Am the Man Who Buys Buttons in New Jersey to Boost For Utah. I Am the Payroll Builder—For Eastern Factories. I am known as the Utah Manufacturers' association and the theme of my song is: Spend Your Money at Home.

Of course you must not do as I do, but do as I tell you. If you do not spend your money at home how am I going to buy buttons and lithographs in the East? If I cannot convince you that you should leave your money with me I will not be able to plaster your city with unsightly billboards and decorate your lapels with booster buttons made 3000 miles from Utah.

You must be consistent whether am or not. Otherwise there will be nothing doing in the way of beautiful billboards of the latest importation.

Of course you understand that these newspapers of Utah are boosting for the state all the time and that they are always ready to devote free space to any proposition for the general good. That is the reason why I can afford to send your money out of the state.

The newspapers are giving Utah its greatest publicity without price. Therefore, I Am the Billboard Builder and the Button Buyer—sometimes known as the Utah Manufacturers' association and the Salt Lake Commercial club.

IMMODEST FEMALE DRESS ATTACKED

CHURCH PRESIDENT IS SEVERE ON PRESENT STYLE.

Joseph Smith Delivers Stirring Address at Opening Session of Annual Conference—Scores Tobacco Users Unmercifully.

Users of liquor and tobacco, as well as the wearers of some of the modern styles of dress were denounced in scathing terms by President Joseph F. Smith at the opening session of the eighty-fourth semi-annual conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Such words as "irresponsible," "unreliable," "immodest," "immoral" and "damnable" were used by the aged president during the course of his remarks incidentally the users of tea and coffee came in for a scolding at the hands of the president.

Despite the threatening weather, fully 5000 persons were in attendance at the session, which was opened by the choir and congregation singing, "Our God, We Praise to Thee." Prayer was offered by Joseph Eckersley, president of Wayne stake. The choir and congregation then sang, "Oh, Ye Mountains High."

President Joseph F. Smith was the first and principal speaker. In opening, he said that he felt grateful that he had been permitted once more to meet with the Saints in conference. Continuing, he said that never in his life had he felt as much as he did this morning that there was nothing under heaven of so much importance in the children of men as the plan of salvation as revealed to holy men from time to time since the foundation of the earth. He declared that the plan had undergone no change since the beginning of time; that it was and is the complete plan for the redemption of the human race; that it is just the same gospel, the same plan of life, revealed in the last dispensation, as that which was taught by Jesus Christ. He said that it was the greatest desire of his life that he might declare to the children of men that "God has given us the truth."

Continuing, the speaker said that too much time and thought are spent in discussing and thinking of frivolous and temporal things, and not enough to spiritual things.

President Smith said that wherever he went he found a great and growing evidence of disrespect for the gospel. The speaker then commenced to score those who "indulge in the foolish, unclean and harmful practice of smoking tobacco." In unmeasured terms he denounced the users of tobacco and demanded to know what right a man has to make foul the air by his "filthy tobacco breath?" "I have thought seriously that a boy or man who is addicted to the tobacco habit to such an extent that he cannot quit it, is so morally weakened and debased that he is not to be trusted with any responsibility," said President Smith.

Scores Women's Styles.

Tobacco users cannot be trusted and should not be trusted, as they are irresponsible and unreliable, said the speaker. Following along the same line, only a little more severe, he denounced those who used intoxicating liquor. The speaker next turned his attention to those who used tea and coffee, and while the scoring that such people got was not as hard as that which he had directed against the users of tobacco and liquor, it was sufficient for all to understand that he was absolutely opposed to the use of either, especially by members of the church. Said he: "The Lord has said that these things are not good for us; the laws of nature say the same."

The speaker then turned his attention to some of the modern dresses worn by women. He declared that "never in my life, and I am over 75 years old, have I seen such obscene, indecent, impure, suggestive, foolish fashions as some of those which are being worn by the women of today. I want to lift my voice against the infamous practice." The speaker declared that if it was continued it would destroy every bit of womanly modesty and virtue of those who indulged in it.

Continuing, the speaker said that the fashions of this kind come from the most degraded women of the world, the courtesans of Paris; and predicted that if it was continued by other women it would be but a short time before they would sink as low as those who started the fashions.

New Woman Lift Skirt.

Continuing, President Smith said: "The other day I saw a female going across the street to catch a car. When she attempted to get on the car her foot would not reach the step, and she lifted her skirts, like this (illustrating with a movement of his hands). Think of that on a public street and in the sight of dozens of people. Do you think that woman was modest or had any modesty?" Following more strictures on the dress fashion of the day, the speaker said: "I say that the practice is damnable."

Chronic Dyspepsia.

The following unsolicited testimonial should certainly be sufficient to give hope and courage to persons afflicted with chronic dyspepsia: "I have been a chronic dyspeptic for years, and of all of the medicine I have taken, Chamberlain's Tablets have done me more good than anything else," says W.
